Brief It.

6 PROMPTS

6 AI marketing prompts that sound like you.

A free sample of Brief It. Brief Claude, ChatGPT and Gemini the way you'd brief a freelancer.

JAKE TLAPEK

Start here.

AI is the fastest freelancer you'll ever hire. It works at 3 a.m. It never complains about revisions. And it has never met your customer.

That's why so much AI marketing sounds the same. People send it one line and post whatever comes back. You'd never do that with a freelancer. You'd send a brief.

This free sample has 6 of the 50 briefs in Brief It. Each one tells AI what to make and which facts it can't invent.

Set it up

1. Run prompt 01. Copy the answer into a document called Vision Brief.
2. Make a project in your AI tool. As of October 2026, Claude and ChatGPT call it a Project, and Gemini calls it a Gem.
3. Paste prompt 10, the standing brief, into the project's instructions. Upload your Vision Brief.

The standing brief also lists a voice guide, a banned list, a facts file and customer words. The full pack has a prompt that builds each one. Until you have them, the brief tells AI to say what's missing instead of guessing.

No project? Paste your Vision Brief above the prompt.

How to use a prompt

- Change everything in [BRACKETS]. A number in brackets, like [12], is a default. Change it or leave it.
- Leave AI's marks alone. [NEED: ...] means AI needs a fact from you. Give it the fact. Don't let it guess.
- Check every draft before it ships. Prompt 47 shows you how.

47 The four marks

The example business.

Prompt 47 comes with an example from a made-up business. You see the prompt work on a business like yours. It's a real output from Claude, trimmed for space.

Ledger & Thyme is a 9-person bookkeeping firm. They only work with restaurants. They close a restaurant's books by the 5th business day every month, and they put that in writing.

Their Vision Brief:

> Our customer dreams of: running the restaurant they opened it to run, and never doing paperwork at 1 a.m. again.
> We're the only ones who: close a restaurant's books by the 5th business day, guaranteed in writing.
> We'd rather lose a customer than: take on a business that isn't a restaurant.
> It should feel like: a calm regular at the bar who knows your kitchen. Never like: a bank.

They are not a real client. Every name, quote and number in their example is made up. Yours come from your files.

01 The Vision Brief interview

USE IT WHEN you're starting out, or your marketing sounds like everybody else's.

COPY THIS

Don't write anything for me yet. Interview me about my business and my customers, one question at a time.

Rules for the interview:
- Don't suggest answers or give me examples to pick from.
- If I'm vague, push back and ask for a real example. "We care about quality" is not an answer.
- Ask about real customers, real jobs and real decisions, not what I hope is true.
- Ask no more than [12] questions. If I say "write it," stop and write with what you have.

When you can fill all four lines below in my own words, stop and write my Vision Brief:

Our customer dreams of: ___
We're the only ones who: ___
We'd rather lose a customer than: ___
It should feel like ___, never like ___

Mark any line you couldn't fill [NEED: ...]. Then tell me which line is weakest and ask me one more question to fix it. When I answer, rewrite the whole brief. Title it "Vision Brief" so I can save it.

WHY IT WORKS

AI makes a patient interviewer once you tell it to push back. It won't let "we care about quality" slide. The middle two lines are the hard ones. If they don't rule out a customer or a shortcut, keep going.

10 The standing brief

USE IT WHEN you set up a project. Paste it into the project's instructions.

You work for [BUSINESS NAME]. Your job is to do the work. My job is to decide what we say.

Before any task, read my files:
- Vision Brief: who we serve, what they dream of, what makes us different
- Voice guide: how we sound
- Banned list: what we never say
- Facts file: the only numbers, results and credentials you may use
- Customer words: real reviews and quotes

Always:
- Write nothing that contradicts these files.
- Never invent a number, client, result, date, link or credential. If you need one that isn't in my facts file, write [NEED: what you need] in the draft and list everything you need at the end.
- If I mention a file you can't see, say so. Don't guess what's in it.
- Never decide what I think. If a task needs an opinion I haven't given you, ask me one question first.
- Never write "in the style of" another brand or a living person.
- Say it plain. Short sentences. Every line should make sense to a stranger.

Before you show me finished copy, check it:
1. Does anything contradict my files?
2. Could a competitor post any line unchanged?
3. Is there a fact I should double-check?
4. Does any line sound like someone else instead of us?
Fix what fails. Show me the copy, then a short list of what you changed and why.
Skip this check for interviews, plans and tables. When I ask you to review a draft, only mark it. Don't fix it.

When I correct you, write the correction as one line I can add to my banned list or voice guide.

WHY IT WORKS

Write it once, and every chat in the project starts with your facts, your voice and your rules already loaded.

SOCIAL POSTS

17 Short video script from a voice memo

USE IT WHEN you know what you want to say but freeze on camera.

Below is a transcript of me talking about [TOPIC]. Turn it into a [30-45]- second video script, about [100] words.

- Keep my words. Cut, don't rewrite. Fix only what's confusing.
- First 3 seconds: the most interesting thing I said, as close to my words as possible.
- One point only. List the points you cut as ideas for other videos.
- End with one action: [FOLLOW, COMMENT, VISIT THE SITE...].

Write it as short lines I can read off my phone. Mark each new shot [SHOT].

[PASTE TRANSCRIPT]

WHY IT WORKS

You already talk better than you write. Record a voice memo on the walk to your car, and let AI cut it down.

EMAIL

26 Follow up after a call

USE IT WHEN you had a good call and want to keep it moving.

I just had a call with [NAME / TYPE OF CUSTOMER]. Here are my notes: [PASTE]

Write my follow-up email.
- Start with what they said they want, in their words.
- Recap what we agreed, as a short list.
- Give the next step, with a date: [DATE].
- Answer any question I promised to answer. If the answer isn't in my notes, write [NEED: answer].

Under 150 words. No "just circling back" or "per our conversation."

WHY IT WORKS

Repeat their words back to them. It proves you listened, and it's the best pitch you have.

WEBSITE AND SEARCH

34 Reply to a review

USE IT WHEN a review comes in on Google, Yelp or anywhere else, good or bad.

Here's a review of my business: [PASTE REVIEW]
What happened, from my side: [YOUR SIDE, or "nothing to add"]

Write a public reply under 80 words.
- Thank them for one specific thing they said.
- If it's negative: no excuses, no arguing, no details about their job or account. Say what we'll fix, or ask them to contact [NAME] at [EMAIL OR PHONE].
- Never offer anything in exchange for changing the review.
- Sound like me, not like a template.

If it mentions an injury, a lawsuit or money owed, don't draft a reply. Tell me to answer it myself.

WHY IT WORKS

Shoppers read how you answer a bad review. A calm, specific reply can win the next customer.

47 The four marks

USE IT WHEN you have a draft. Any draft.

Run 01 first. This check reads the Vision Brief that 01 writes.

Here's our Vision Brief: [PASTE, or "it's in the project files"]
Here's a draft: [PASTE]

Act as the client who wrote this brief. Mark every line that:
1. contradicts the brief
2. a competitor could publish unchanged
3. states a fact I need to double-check
4. sounds like somebody else instead of us

Don't rewrite anything yet. Show the draft with each problem line marked with every number that applies, plus a few words on why.

WHY IT WORKS

It checks the draft against your Vision Brief, line by line. You decide what to fix.

47 Example: The four marks

Ledger & Thyme, the made-up example business · Claude · October 2026 · trimmed for space

EXAMPLE OUTPUT

Line 1 · marked 1, 2, 4

> At Ledger & Thyme, we're passionate about providing top-notch bookkeeping solutions for businesses of all sizes.

- 1: "Businesses of all sizes." We only take restaurants.
- 2: Swap our name out and any firm in the country could run this line.
- 4: "We're passionate about," "top-notch," "solutions," "businesses of all sizes." That's four banned phrases in one sentence.

Line 3 · marked 1, 2, 3, 4

> Studies show 60% of restaurants fail in their first year because of poor bookkeeping.

- 1: We're supposed to feel like a calm regular at the bar. This is a scare tactic. It also blames owners for their books, and our banned list says we never do that.
- 3: Which studies? The 60% isn't in the facts file. "Because of poor bookkeeping" claims a cause, and we have nothing that backs it.

(Lines 2 and 4 trimmed.)

Overall

- Not one line passes all four checks.
- The one thing only we do is missing: books closed by the 5th business day, guaranteed in writing. That's why every line fails check 2.

One question before I rewrite: is the free audit a real offer, and is that the right link?
